David Lindsay™

Restricted Movement Clothing Collection

David Lindsay was established in February 2005 by Sally Keenan (pictured). A passion for sewing and design coupled with a 25 year background in nursing gave her a vision of developing designs for those specifically with restricted movement.

Our patented clothing collection features a unique 'Tunstole' fitting for men and women with restricted movement that need help with dressing (See page 9 for How the Tunstole fitting works), Trousers are back opening and skirts are wrap around where stated. Standard fitting is also available, all these fantastic fittings come in daywear, nightwear, underwear and accessories.

Our beautiful quality fabrics are all tested for suitability to commercial washers and driers, and have been tried and tested extensively.

Please take a closer look at our clothing collection in this catalogue or alternatively visit our on-line shop at www.davidlindsay.co.nz

How the Tunstole fitting Works

Tunstole fitting is for those who have a limited range of movement, or who need assistance when dressing. They are fully back opening and can be put on the wearer with only minimal movement of the arms. The wearer can be assisted into the garment when standing, sitting or while lying in bed. Style no's 1002, 1004, 1008, 1012, 3002 & 3004 are uniquely made so that the beads and scarves are the actual fastening mechanism. All garments are also available in standard fitting.

Stage 1: Holding the open garment in front of the wearer. Assist the wearers arms into the garment. Feeding the arms into the sleeves. There is no need for shoulder manipulation.

Stage 2: Holding both collar sections take (in example) the right collar around behind the neck, the generous back of the garment follows to drape across the wearers back.

Stage 3: Thread the collar through the opening in the left shoulder seam. (this action helps to keep the garment flat across the back and sit well at the shoulders, it also helps secure the garment along with the fastening method).

Stage 4: Take the other collar behind the neck, again the generous back of the garment will drape across the wearers back, providing a double layer, for protection, warmth and discretion.

Stage 5: Bring each collar section forward.

Stage 6: Button collar down.
